5. PROCEDURE SOPs FOR MANAGEMENT OF INSTRUMENTS :

1. Instruments which contact normally sterile tissue or intact mucous membrane should be used sterile at the point of use.
2. Hand pieces used in routine dentistry shall be used sterile at the point of use, as they contact mucosa.
3. Instruments which are to be used in semi-critical and critical areas must be packaged prior to sterilization so as to remain sterile in the packaging. This allows the instruments to be sterile at their point of use.
4. These kits are then stored in drawers away from direct aerosol contamination. These instruments are therefore sterile at the point of use.
5. The instruments used for a brief consultation or review may include the examination kit and/or the periodontal maintenance kit.
6. Instruments which contact intact skin should be decontaminated prior to use. It is not essential that they are sterile at the time of use. Although it is preferable for these items to have been sterilized, items which are heat labile can be decontaminated using a clinical detergent.

6. ESSENTIAL EQUIPMENT.—Following is the list of equipment essential for a fully functional dental department in the Clinic:

1. Dental chair with its necessary accessories
2. Dental chair compressor
3. Dental P/A radiograph unit
4. Dental examination sets and surgical instruments
5. Dental Sterilization Unit (Autoclave etc.)
6. Sterlizer
7. Lab Micro Motor
8. Impression Trays

7. MAINTENANCE OF EQUIPMENT :

1. Staff operating equipment will be trained in handling the equipment as per the manufacturer instruction manual.
2. The clinic will develop a routine schedule for inspection and calibration of equipment based upon original equipment manufacturer guidelines.
3. These services can be provided through an in-house arrangement or alternatively through outsourcing.

8. INFECTION CONTROL :

1. PURPOSE : The purpose of infection control is to prevent the transmission of these disease-producing microorganisms:
 - a) From one patient to another;
 - b) From dental care provider to patient;
 - c) From patient to dental care provider or other staff (such as an assistant, receptionist; and laboratory technician).
2. Every practitioner must:
 - a. Ensure the premises in which he or she practices are kept in a clean and hygienic state to prevent the spread of infectious disease;

- b. Ensure that in attending a patient he or she takes such steps as are practicable to prevent or contain the spread of infectious disease.

9. DESIGN AND MAINTENANCE OF PREMISES :

1. The treatment areas should be adjacent to the Instrument Recirculation (IRC) areas.
2. Keep the treatment area and IRC area distinct and away from administrative areas and bathrooms.

10. WASTE MANAGEMENT IN DENTAL UNIT :

At the completion of treatment all sharp items must be disposed off into the clearly labelled, puncture resistant, approved sharps container, which conforms to the specifications.

11. SOPs FOR MANAGEMENT OF BLOOD AND BODY FLUID SPILLS :

1. Risk Management principles must be understood by all staff
2. Keep the environment safe at all times for patients and staff
3. Traffic areas should remain clear, with equipment and supplies stored in their designated location.
4. Familiarize staff with all work practices, which remain constant unless prior notice is given of any change.
5. Always locate containers for sharps, segregated waste and contaminated instruments in the same place for easy access.

12. SAFETY MEASURES :

1. To prevent inadvertent or hazardous event from taking place
2. To protect the patient from any harm during the course of hospitalization
3. To caution patient, relative, and the staff of any hazardous events
4. To urge the patient/healthcare providers to observe safety measures to avoid dangers when performing duties.
 - a. Safety security; freedom from danger, injury, damage, and harmful side-effects.
